

FAMU

COLLEGE OF
PHARMACY
+ PHARMACEUTICAL
SCIENCES INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC HEALTH

FLORIDA AGRICULTURAL AND MECHANICAL UNIVERSITY

From Classroom to Athletics: Dr. Oriaku's Enduring FAMU Spirit

Tallahassee, Fla. - With quiet strength and unwavering devotion, Dr. Ebenezer T. Oriaku, professor in the FAMU College of Pharmacy and Pharmaceutical Sciences, Institute of Public Health (CoPPS, IPH), stands as a shining example of Excellence With Caring. A true son of FAMU and FAMU Athletics, his lifelong dedication to scholarship, mentorship, and the Rattler spirit has now been recognized with a plaque from University Advancement. This honor reflects not only his professional achievements but also his enduring commitment to the FAMU family (holds three FAMU degrees)—where pride meets humility, and service meets legacy.

In the quiet dignity of a hallway lined with legacy, Dr. Ebenezer T. Oriaku, (PhD, Pharmacology-FAMU, 1991)—professor in the FAMU CoPPS, IPH, and steadfast son of FAMU Athletics—receives the “Division Director of Choice” plaque from University Advancement. Captured by Dr. James L. Moran, Jr., this image reflects a life of service, a heart of humility, and a spirit forever woven into the fabric of FAMU's Excellence With Caring.